

Ben Coull

“I applied to be a Youth MP because I'm passionate about New Zealand's political system and how it affects everyday Kiwis. I believe that we as rangatahi must get involved in politics to make tangible changes to our lives and the lives of those around us. Being a Youth MP is an opportunity to brainstorm, debate, and think critically about modern issues that young people often aren't given a platform to talk about. Being a Youth MP will expose me to diverse perspectives and help me to understand and hopefully even begin to tackle some of the significant underlying issues in society.”
