

Esha Ram

“I want to be a Youth MP because it will help me grow as a leader, improve my communication skills, and build my confidence. I’ve faced many injustices – both in society and within my own culture – which fuels my passion for advocacy and my belief in empowering others. I want to bring my lived experience, empathy, and determination to this role to represent diverse youth voices. Being a Youth MP gives me the chance to learn, speak up for those who are often ignored, and fight for change in areas like mental health, climate action, and education reform. I care deeply about these issues and will always have the courage to advocate for what our generation believes in.”
