“When I heard about this opportunity I was really interested because my family and I often talk about current events in New Zealand and what our opinions are on political matters. Last year, we did the hikoi for Toitū te Tiriti and found it to be a very uplifting experience. I study history and want to study te reo Māori but sadly there is no teacher at my school to do it so I can't. Last year my family came to Wellington, and we did a tour of Parliament. It was my favourite part of the trip and sparked an interest in politics for me.”
