“I applied to be a Youth MP because I'm passionate about representing young people who share the values of freedom and equality. Being a Year 13 student, I see first-hand the impacts of race-based scholarships and open days on students. Many of us feel excluded because we are considered the "wrong race". This reinforces my commitment to equal treatment under the law. Government should always protect individual freedoms and provide equal opportunities without micromanaging or implementing discriminatory policies. As a Youth MP, I'll advocate for a society where success is based on merit. I believe in individual responsibility and equal opportunity, not in guaranteed equal outcomes for everyone.”
