“In the future, I aspire to study law, and I believe that this programme will give me a very nuanced, firsthand experience of how societal issues and the public voice translates to legislation. In particular, I want to be able to understand what our government is doing about particular issues and how exactly the law maintains this order and cohesion in society. By taking part in this programme, I also hope to witness and understands the views of youth across our nation – whether fellow Youth MPs or simply citizens of our nation, in order to widen my view of the world and diversify my understanding. Another key element of why I applied to be a Youth MP is to be able to make a greater impact on my society and to voice my concerns, such as on education, where I believe my opinion is important.”
