“I applied to be a Youth MP because I’m passionate about making sure young people have a voice in decisions that affect us. As someone who’s loves to be involved in youth leadership and community work, I see this as a powerful opportunity to represent my peers from Murihiku Southland on a national level and raise issues that matter to us: from mental health and education to climate change and equity. I believe young people have strong ideas and real experiences to share, and I want to make sure those are heard in Parliament.”
